Hiya! I’m Grace, your friendly neighbourhood ginger, and I study English and Spanish. You can usually find me failing to cook in Woodstock kitchen or poring over a translation in the old library. I love our college and hope this position will be a good way for me to give something back to the community.

Why I feel qualified for this role:

• I have experience organising events for and working with women’s groups, which I feel would translate well to a university setting.

• I am well organised. If nothing else, I am always on top of paper work and would be happy to add any admin from duties as women’s rep to my lists. I have a late-night filing problem. It’s not a joke.

• I am also passionate about staying up to date with global gender inequality issues, and using my studies to educate myself on the theory and history behind sexism.

• I am always up. My subjects’ unpredictable contact time and work loads mean that I am rarely in bed at an early hour. If you want someone to vent to in the middle of the night hmu xo

• I care a lot about ensuring that St Anne’s is a supportive environment for anyone. Women’s rights and equal opportunities are at the heart of our college history. I recognise the importance of maintaining and improving on the systems in place to deal with women’s issues.

My plans for women’s rep:

• To continue the free sanitary distribution scheme, and to expand it with next year’s improved budget.

• To use the JCR page as a depository for all news relating to women’s events and related opportunities at St Anne’s and beyond.

• To work with the other college officers and equalities reps to tackle issues intersectionally. I understand that there are things that go beyond my expertise/experience and I will always be sure to refer you to the right person.

• To plan more events - for fundraising and entertainment - with other officers.

• To add mine to the many friendly faces on the JCR committee (and beyond!).
