Disabilities Rep

About Me

---

I'm Warwick, the (one and only) St Anne's Maths and Philosophy student. When I'm not procrastinating doing my problem sheets, my hobbies include listening to podcasts, learning piano, playing board games, and procrastinating writing my essays.

Why I Want To Be Disabilities Rep

I was diagnosed with ADHD at 17, and I've been dealing with the symptoms for as long as I can remember. I know first-hand how having a disability can take up time, induce stress, and force you to miss out on loads of opportunities. And in many cases, all of this is invisible to other people.

Especially in the high-pressure environment of Oxford, where it feels like we have to schedule in our emotional breakdowns, these experiences can be a real setback to grades, socialization, and just general well-being. I care a lot about helping students with any kind of disability not feel isolated because of it, and getting them the support they need.

My Aims

Help organise and promote talks which spread awareness about disabilities.

Set up online and real-life meets for disabled people to get together and talk – Board games may be involved.

Help take criticism from Stanners about the Disability Service to the 'higher-ups.'
